

JASON JOBST

JASON JOBST, was born in humble beginnings in Memphis, TN. His parents struggled to make it in more ways than one. He remembers though that music was always in the background. He later began teaching himself how to play on his step-fathers guitar and would sing lead vocals in church at only 15 yrs of age. At that time people would often joke and say that his voice resembled Bob Dylan. However, his voice matured, he kept singing and its a good thing he did.

Although Jason's parents were not musicians he had music all around him since his godfather Jimi Jamison was the famous Memphis vocalist from the 80's rock band Survivor. Later Jason would spend over 10 years as the worship pastor of his church attempting to use his talent for a greater purpose.

During this 10 years Jason found a love of the craft of writing songs but just couldn't seem to fit in. Charity, his wife and native Texan would always say he had a voice for country music. In 2010 the mortgage crash forced Jason to relocate his family to Plano, TX. For the next few years he would find work in music very little except for the occisional church.

On a whim, Jason played his first open mic with Texas Music Network and that set the stage for his growth into the Texas Country Music industry. Jason began to open for headliners like Casper Mcwade and Kelly McGuire. Over the next few years he penned some great songs to be released but his demos are currently being spun by internet radio including "Midnight Rig to Memphis" and "Texas (is the state)".

In 2022 Jason won "Production of the Year" for Texas State Songwriters Championship. Jason spends his time between churches, benefits, private parties, local gigs, open mics, and supporting fellow local texas musicians.
